Bulletin Board Invites Comments on GPO Access

A new free Special Interest Group (SIG), GPOACCES, has been added to the Federal Bulletin Board (202-512-1397). This SIG contains the text of Senate bill S. 564, the "Government Printing Office Electronic Information Access Enhancement Act of 1993," signed into law by President Clinton on June 8, 1993 (Public Law 103-40).

The SIG also contains the text of the accompanying House and Senate reports and the President's statement on the bill. It will also include relevant Fact Sheets prepared by GPO's Office of Electronic Information Dissemination Services (OEIDS). Depository librarians and the general public may address comments and questions to OEIDS by sending an E-mail message to GPOACCES.

Manual of Federal Geographic Data Products Not Ordered for Depositories

The Manual of Federal Geographic Data Products, recently published by the Federal Geographic Data Committee (FGDC) and prepared under an Environmental Protection Agency contract, will not be distributed to depository libraries. GPO erroneously failed to order copies when the issuing agency submitted its printing requisition. As this publication has 4-color process, tabbed pages, a binder, and graphics, the set up and replication costs to LPS to reprint this publication would be prohibitive.

This manual describes over 150 products commonly distributed to the public by twenty-one Federal agencies. The products include maps, digital data, aerial photography, etc. This publication can be obtained by writing to "Manual Requests," FGDC Secretariat, U.S. Geological Survey, 590 National Center, Reston, VA 22092; fax (703) 648-5755; or Internet "gdc.@usgs.gov". FGDC plans to make the manual available through the National Technical Information Service after the current supply is exhausted.

Library Receives LSCA Grant for Effective Use of Technology

The Silas Bronson Library of Waterbury, Connecticut recently received a $10,000 LSCA grant for the "Effective Use of Technology." The emphasis of the grant was the establishment of a CD-ROM workstation to provide access to business-related information. Michael DeLeo, Business Services Librarian, reports that a major selling point was that the Silas Bronson Library, as a Federal depository, received many free CD-ROM products from the government but lacked the funds to purchase the necessary hardware to retrieve this valuable information for the citizens in its community.

DeLeo supplied excerpts from the grant application, shown below, that might assist others in a similar quest.

Abstract

...Initially, the workstation will provide access to business-related CD-ROM products released by the federal government, thus helping the library better fulfill its role as a depository library.

...The value of the depository CD-ROM products already held--but not used--by the library, if bought commercially (prices are from the SIGCAT CD-ROM Compendium), is $3,400.00

One such CD-ROM product is the National Trade Data Bank (NTDB), which has been requested by patrons and for which clients have been referred to the library by other agencies. At Boston Public Library, this product has "become a popular tool for exporters. 'NTDB is our most popular CD-ROM product,' says Linda MacIver, a reference librarian..." (Gregory Sandler. "National Trade Data on Disc." In: Information Today. April 1992: 31-32).

Silas Bronson Library, as the only public library in Region One that is a (partial) Federal Depository library, regularly receives referrals from other libraries and agencies for government documents...

Project Objectives

...2. To enhance the depository collection by allowing access to government produced and deposited CD-ROM products.

Will be met by installing such CD-ROM products on the workstation, providing such access for the first time; also, the entire government document collection will be highlighted, especially with more direction to GPO on Silverplatter, now in the library's Main Reading Room.
